

But now down to death to speak upon the four points upon which the do say that the Defendant's Verdict is given upon himself in damages from as against him the plaintiff both Complain; and that they do affirm the Plaintiff's Damages by account thereof to amount to eight Shillings. But find that the Defendant both duly accounted all and singular the goods, chattels and creases of the King as any due. Therefore it is considered by the Court that the Plff receive of the Defendant his damages of four as from several assizes when after and his costs by him taken his fees in this behalf expended, and the
